It also includes more of her reflections on writing and her literary ambitions.

Are there significant differences in how Anne's relationships are portrayed in the full text?

Yes, the full text reveals more complexity in her relationships. For instance, her relationship with her mother, Edith, is depicted with greater frankness, including more instances of conflict and frustration. Her evolving feelings for Peter van Pels are also more extensively detailed.

Does the 'full text' include Anne's own editing and revisions of her diary?

Yes, a crucial aspect of the 'full text' is that it includes Anne's own work on revising her diary for future publication, which she referred to as 'Joachim' or 'Kitty's' diary. This shows her conscious effort to shape her narrative and her aspirations as a writer.
