Structure and Classification System

The core strength of Michael Edwards fragrances of the world lies in its innovative classification system. The book organizes perfumes into major fragrance families and subfamilies, providing a structured approach to understanding scent compositions. This hierarchical model simplifies the diversity of fragrances by grouping them based on dominant olfactory notes and accords.

Major Fragrance Families

The classification divides perfumes into seven main families, reflecting broad scent categories that are easy to recognize:

- Floral: Dominated by the scent of flowers, often soft and romantic.
- Oriental: Rich, warm, and exotic fragrances with spices, resins, and vanilla.
- Woody: Featuring notes from trees and woods, such as sandalwood, cedar, and patchouli.
- Fresh: Crisp and clean scents, including citrus, green, and aquatic notes.
- Fruity: Sweet and tangy notes derived from various fruits.
- Chypre: A classic family characterized by citrus top notes, a mossy base, and a floral heart.
- Leather: Characterized by smoky, animalistic, and leather accords.

Subfamilies and Nuances

Within these broad families, Michael Edwards fragrances of the world refines categories further by identifying subfamilies. These subgroups capture subtle nuances and combinations of notes, enabling a more precise description of each fragrance's character.
