Introduced to promote interdisciplinary learning and continuous assessment, CBCS exams differ significantly from traditional evaluation methods. The system emphasizes modular courses where students earn credits for each completed course, which contributes to their overall degree requirements.

Structure of CBCS Exams

CBCS exams typically consist of a combination of internal assessments and end-semester examinations. The internal assessments may include assignments, quizzes, presentations, and practical work, whereas the end-semester exams evaluate the students' comprehensive understanding of the subject matter. The grading system under CBCS is credit-based and follows a standardized grade point average (GPA) scale, ensuring uniformity across universities.
