It is divided into multiple stages, including preliminary exams, mains, and interviews in some cases.

Exam Stages and Format

The CBIC recruitment process often includes a preliminary screening test consisting of objective-type questions, followed by a descriptive or interview round. Understanding the weightage of each section helps candidates allocate their study efforts efficiently.

Types of Questions

The exam questions range from multiple-choice questions (MCQs) to case studies and descriptive answers. The MCQs test conceptual clarity, while descriptive questions evaluate in-depth understanding and application of laws and regulations.

Marking Scheme and Cutoffs

Awareness of the marking scheme and cutoffs for each stage facilitates targeted preparation. Negative marking may apply in some sections, emphasizing accuracy over guesswork.
